

APRIL 2009

► THE SHOW

It's difficult to know when writing about Britain's favourite mind-controlling wizard Derren Brown whether or not you are already under his control. He is to tour the UK later this month with his new Enigma show. Buy tickets now. That is an order from the master. seetickets.com

► THE GAME

It's not the catchiest title in the world, granted. But handheld role-playing game Valkyrie Profile: Covenant Of The Plume, which is set across the worlds of Norse mythology, will soak up all the free time you can possibly devote to it. £18, play.com

► THE FACIAL

Throughout April, Kyoku will be giving free facials to men who turn up at their new Selfridge's concession at weekends. With a facial scrub that's made with volcanic ash, it's the manliest way you'll ever exfoliate. selfridges.co.uk

► THE CHOCOLATES

Easter is bad for masculinity – as anyone who's chaired a meeting with a half-eaten Bob The Builder chocolate egg on his desk will know. Galler restores some dignity with this £60 leather cigar box. The smokes are tubes of pralines – not rolled on

► THE CAMERA

Just a few years ago, five megapixels was enough; now 15 megapixel sensors are cropping up in consumer cameras like this Canon EOS 500D, which also does 1080p HD video. A 3in LCD viewfinder is a neat touch, and you can shoot 3.4 images per second in burst
